IVANHOE, November 13.—Emmett O.
Porter, an employe of the Invanhoe
Furnace Company, was instantly killed near the furnace about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. It seems that he jumped on an Ivanhoe and Carroll rallroad engine going to the ore-washer, and for some reason leaned far enough and for some reason leaned far enough from the cab to strike the trestle timber as the engine passed under the tipple. The deceased was quite a popular young man, about twenty-two years old, and the son of Millard F. Porter. In addition to the father, the deceased is survived by two sisters and one brother—Mrs. John E. Liddle, of Ivanhoe; Mrs. Clinton H. Painter, of Pulaski, and Bernhard Porter, of West Virginia.

Dun's Trade Review.

NEW YORK, November 13.—R. G.
Dun's weekly review of trade to-morrow will say:

Expectations are being fully realized in the increased demand for manufactured products that each day reduces the percentage of idla machinery and the number of vnemployed. The action of stocks is disexpectation of stocks is disexpectation of stocks and factured products that each day reduces the percentage of idle machinery and the number of ynemployed. The depleted condition of stocks is disclosed as business expands, and throughout all industrial channels there is a sudden pressure to meet requirements that assures activity for some time at least.

In the primary market for dry goods, merchants are operating on a more liberal scale than at any time since a year and a half ago. Cotton mills are rapidly resuming, but accept business only where the raw cotton is controlled and an assured basis of profit can be established. Some prices have already advanced and others are contemplated. Export business continues restricted, foreign buyers considering the higher values excessive. While clothiers tradesmen have ascertained the trend of demand, there is still an inclination to proceed cautiously in placing orders for duplicate lines of spring woolens, so as to be prepared for the normal quantity of cancellations. A better movement of spring goods is anticipated as soon as colder weather reduces stocks of heavy-weights.

Manufacturers of boots and shoes report a substantial increase in the weights.

Manufacturers of boots and shoes report a substantial increase in the orders placed by jobbers and retailers, whose stocks have been allowed to become depleted, and who now anticipate a much larger sum.
